defendants and friends came to court wearing blue jeans and wool shirts and T-shirts. Several wore red shirts emblazoned with black letters pronouncing, "I was born in a sewer called capitalism, but now I'm living for revolution."

Hopkins said such conduct is totally in keeping with the ideology of the RCP members. To act otherwise, he said, "would be asking for mercy from a system that deserves contempt and which should be done away with. It would be legitimizing these courts."

The political rhetoric is the "the only way we can get off — by exposing the lies of the ruling class," he said.

The defendants had used much the same rhetoric earlier when tried in District Court. There they were found guilty and given 18 to 24 months, although none of them had any previous criminal record. They appealed those convictions to Superior Court.

Despite the fierceness of his rhetoric in the courtroom, Hopkins is a soft-spoken, friendly, polite man. In quiet conversations about himself and how he came to be a communist, the names of his wife and two children come up often.

Although his political beliefs are not shared by all of his family, his beliefs have not brought him their disfavor. His parents, he said, in a recent letter told him they disagreed with his views but respected his opinions and were proud that he stands up for his beliefs.

They have done that themselves, he said. His mother and one of his brothers have been active in anti-nuclear power efforts. Another brother is a labor steward. His sister is a nurse.

Hopkins has been oriented toward the liberal end of the political spectrum since high school, he said. He liked Nelson Rockefeller and abhorred Barry Goldwater in 1964.

When he was 18, his father was laid off work after a 27-year career at a factory where he was a foreman. "That hit me pretty hard," he said. His father sold the house and started a business, which promptly failed. Now, at 68, he is back at the plant.

Hopkins' drift to the left came to a climax while at the University of New Hampshire in the tumultuous 1968 election year. He studied international relations and political science.

Hopkins joined the anti-Vietnam War movement and took an interest in the Black Liberation Movement. He liked Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy but was dismayed by the riotous and violent Democratic convention in Chicago.

His study of Marxism at the time convinced him all of this was part of a system designed to keep the wealthy ruling class in domination over the oppressed working class.

If there is no revolution, nuclear war will obliterate the earth, he believes.

And that's worse than spending time in jail, he said.

Juror: Acquittal Vote Caused Furor

BY STEVE BERRY

Daily News Staff Writer

Fellow jurors called her a communist sympathizer and a martyr in long and frequently hostile jury deliberations last week during the trial of nine Revolutionary Communist Party members, Mrs. Virginia Dozier said Tuesday.

"They were suspicious of me, my integrity was questioned, and one woman asked me how old I was, as if I was senile," Mrs. Dozier, 61, said recalling her experience as the sole juror who held out for acquittal of all nine defendants during the 2½ days of deliberations.

Some jurors said they "hated to go back and face the judge" without a verdict, she said. Others said, "Let's hurry up so we can go home," and still others complained "that this is costing the state a lot of money," recalled Mrs. Dozier, a retired teacher and the wife of a professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Even so, Mrs. Dozier said her fellow jurors for the most part were "very conscientious." She attributed the hostility they expressed to frustration caused by the long trial, confusing testimony and long jury deliberations. Many of the jurors were nice to her throughout, Mrs. Dozier said, and after it was all over, some apologized to her Monday.

Though the jury was bitterly divided at times, it was unanimous on the acquittal of one of nine members on a single count of inciting to riot. The jury, however, deadlocked on misdemeanor rioting and related charges against the other eight.

As a result, Judge William Z. Wood declared a mistrial; and District Attorney Mike Schlosser said some, if not all, of the defendants not acquitted would be retried.

The trial lasted three weeks. The cases were in Superior Court on an appeal of lower District Court convictions that brought 18- to 24-month jail sentences. The charges grew out of the defendants' efforts to promote an upcoming rally and sell a party newspaper last October in the Hampton Homes neighborhood. Police claimed they tried to incite a riot when some were arrested on charges of violating the noise ordinance of the city.

Mrs. Dozier said she "took a lot of flak" for her positions during the deliberations.

After the verdict Tuesday several of the jurors were critical of Mrs. Dozier, though they refused to reveal her name. They accused her of ignoring the evidence and refusing to believe anything the police said during the trial.

"They really romped on me," Mrs. Dozier said. "Some of those jurors said to me, 'Couldn't you see the smirk on those kids' faces?'"

Juror Says Acquittal Stance Aroused Anger

From B-1

One juror questioned if she believed what the police said. "I said yes, but they are human just as we are and they can make mistakes."

Mrs. Dozier said, "I would have been one of the first to convict if they had proven their case beyond a reasonable doubt. I would have been just as adamant about voting guilty if the evidence supported it."

She said the police possibly decided to break up the incident at Hampton Homes because they didn't like the ideas the defendants were spreading. That argument was one of the major defense contentions.

"I was never convinced there was a riot or a clear and present danger of one happening," she said.

She said her vote for acquittal was based on what she said was considerable conflicting testimony. She also expressed suspicion of what she said was a police sergeant's ability to recount events and statements verbatim, without notes, five months after they happened, when she and other jurors couldn't recall with similar accuracy what was said in the trial just a few days earlier.

Eight In RCP Win Mistrial

BY STEVE BERRY
Daily News Staff Writer

A three-week trial on misdemeanor rioting charges against nine members of the Revolutionary Communist Party ended in a mistrial Monday after a Guilford County Superior Court jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked on verdicts for eight of the defendants.

The jury was given the cases Friday and deliberated on them that night, most of Saturday and all day Monday before Judge William Z. Wood declared a mistrial. Four times during their deliberations they told Wood they had reached an unbreakable deadlock but Wood each time asked them to try to reach a unanimous decision.

One juror reported the panel of 11 women and one man was deadlocked at 11-1 for conviction of eight defendants. The one case in which all agreed was an acquittal verdict for Jon Leavers, who was charged with inciting to riot. District Attorney Mike Schlosser said he expects to retry some, if not all, of the eight defendants for whom no verdict was reached.

Asked if the cases were worth the amount of time and money spent since they were misdemeanor charges, Schlosser said, "A prosecutor must be mindful of the cost, but he can't let that factor alone be determinative."

In a news release, the Revolutionary Communist Party charged that Wood, in sending the jury back to continue deliberations four times after it reported a deadlock, was trying "to wear down the jury in order to get the conviction the state wants in this political trial."

The nine defendants were charged with crimes ranging from disturbing the peace to inciting to riot — all misdemeanors. The charges grew out of a rally the defendants conducted in the Hampton Homes public housing neighborhood in October.

Their cases were on appeal to Superior Court from District Court where they had been found guilty and given sentences of 18 to 24 months each by Judge Frank Campbell.

The jury had 14 charges to consider. Juror Corelli Jackson said the single dissenting juror was intransigent from the first vote. She said the woman voted in favor of the defendants consistently because she did not believe testimony from any of the police officers.

Besides Leavers, the other defendants were Tim Hopkins, Lisa Ann Frith, Thomas Robert Hirschi, Teresa Kay Kime, Kevin Moore, Mary Jean Outlaw, Jeffrey Alan Rooney and Gregory Lee Johnson.

RCP Defense Lawyers Want To Quit Case

BY STEVE BERRY
Daily News Staff Writer

Lawyers Mike Lee of Greensboro and Allen Mason of Durham asked the court Thursday to allow them to withdraw as attorneys for four Revolutionary Communist Party members.

In their motions, the lawyers said they have disagreements with the defendants on how to handle the cases. Both also said they are suffering financial losses because of the time it is taking to represent the RCP members.

Two or three more lawyers will file similar motions, according to Lee.

Lee and Mason were among six lawyers — all appointed by the court and therefore to be paid by the state — representing the RCP members during a three-week Superior Court trial that ended Monday when a jury was unable to reach a verdict on all but one of the nine defendants.

The jury deadlocked at 11-1 for guilty verdicts on most of the defendants but did acquit one.

The defendants were charged with misdemeanor rioting and related charges at Hampton Homes during a rally there Oct. 11. The case got into Superior Court on appeal of a District Court conviction that brought the maximum sentence of 18 to 24 months.

District Attorney Mike Schlosser has said he expects to retry some, if not all, of the remaining eight defendants.

Lee said representing the RCP members has been a trying experience. "The defendants decided who would testify and who wouldn't," he said. One, Jeff Rooney, insisted on serving as co-counsel and giving the opening statement, which was primarily a political statement, Lee noted.

Mason, who was employed to represent Allan Hirschi and Tim Hopkins and appointed by the court to represent Kevin Moore, said the defendants "constantly ignored advice in many things, including the making of motions, selection of the jury, opening statements by Rooney, testimony by another defendant, and plea negotiations."

Lee and Mason said the case has caused them financial hardship.

"They might just as well take my license if they make me stay on the case," said Lee, contending that his legal bill so far is close to $6,000 but that the state will pay him only about $1,000. This loss is in addition to possible loss of prospective clients while representing the RCP members, he said.

Mason said the defendants owe him $833 from the District Court proceedings and $2,000 from the Superior Court proceedings.

Lee and Mason said their appointments by the court were made over their objections.

Flag Burning

GREENSBORO POLICE Thursday arrested one member of the Revolutionary Communist Party — and were searching for another — after five members of the group ended a demonstration in front of the federal courthouse in Greensboro by burning an American flag. The RCP member arrested on a charge of desecrating the flag, a misdemeanor, was Teresa Kime, shown above holding flag. Police were looking Thursday afternoon for Don Barnwell, who reportedly set fire to the flag. The group was demonstrating in support of their national leader, Bob Avakian, who is facing several felony charges in Washington. Shown at right is Timothy Hopkins. Other person were not identified.

RCP members

Eight sentenced to 18-24 months

Eight members of the Revolutionary Communist Party were sentenced today in Guilford District Court to 18-24 months in prison for inciting to riot at Hampton Homes in October.

A ninth member arrested the same day received 60 days for resisting arrest and for refusing to turn down the volume of a loudspeaker.

Charges of inciting to riot were dismissed against a 10th member of the RCP arrested at Hampton Homes on Oct. 11.

All convicted RCP members gave notice of appeal to Superior Court, where they will receive a new trial.

Several members of the same group convicted today were given active sentences last week for disrupting classes at UNC-G on Oct. 10. Those convictions were also appealed.

According to testimony Friday in the trials of those arrested in Hampton Homes, police responded to a complaint of loud noise.

When officers asked a member of the RCP using a loudspeaker to turn down the volume, she refused. The officer placed her under arrest.

At a nearby section of the housing project, another group of RCP members had attracted a crowd of about 75 to 100 as they passed out literature.

Police had been observing the group, but did not make any arrests until that group began using a loudspeaker in violation of the city's noise ordinance.

When police arrested a RCP member, another member jumped on the officers' car, according to testimony, and urged residents of the project to get their guns because the revolution had started.

Later, eight others were arrested for inciting to riot, disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and violations of the city noise ordinance.

All except Betty Sullivan, whose charges were dismissed, were found guilty as charged. District Court Judge Frank Campbell combined charges for those accused of more than one violation.

Convicted were Lisa Ann Frith, Thomas Robert Hirschi, Timothy L. Hopkins, Gregory L. Johnson, Teresa K. Kim, Kevin Moore, Mary Jean Outlaw, Jeffrey A. Rooney and Jon Scott Leavers.

Miss Frith received a 60-day sentence for resisting arrest and violating the noise ordinance. The others received 18-24-month sentences. All remain free on bond pending Superior Court action.

Inciting To Riot Gets Leftists Jail Terms

Eight members of the Revolutionary Communist Party, one of two communist groups active in Greensboro in recent months, were sentenced Monday to 18 to 24 months in jail for inciting to riot at Hampton Homes in October.

Another RCP member was given 60 days for resisting arrest and violating the city's noise ordinance.

Lawyer Allen Mason immediately noted an appeal to Superior Court. All nine defendants remained free on bond.

(The Revolutionary Communist Party is a different organization from the Communist Workers Party, five of whose members died following a shootout with Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis here Nov. 3. The two communist groups have ideological differences.)

Mason, who predicted guilty verdicts for his clients last Friday when evidence was presented, said the sentences were about "what I expected." Throughout the trial, Mason contended the arrests were the result of "zealous attempts by police to stop any rally by communists."

Assistant District Attorney David Idol argued the defendants urged the crowd to "Kill the Pigs" and "get Joiner," one of the police officers who responded to a complaint of disturbing the peace. "What it boils down to is a question of credibility," Idol said.

Judge Frank Campbell found the defendants — Thomas Robert Hirschi, Timothy Hopkins, Gregory Johnson, Teresa K. Kim, Kevin Moore, Mary Jean Outlaw, Jeffrey Rooney and Jon Scott Leavers — guilty as charged in imposing the longer sentences. Lisa Ann Frith received the 60-day sentence. Charges against Betty Sullivan were dismissed after the prosecution failed to put her at the scene.

David Zeiger, a spokesman for the RCP, said party members have been arrested at similar rallies around the country, "but this is the first time they've been given active sentences."

It is "unprecedented," he said, for defendants without prior criminal records to receive active sentences for trespassing or making loud noises. Several of the defendants convicted Monday also were found guilty last week by Judge Campbell of disturbing a class at UNC-G on Oct. 10. They were sentenced to one year in jail.

The arrests at Hampton Homes occurred while party members were passing out leaflets advertising an upcoming speech in Greensboro by RCP national chairman Bob Avakian.

One officer testified he was struck in the back by a rock which left a bruise despite the protective bullet-proof vest he was wearing. In his closing argument, Mason questioned the officer's testimony, contending a vest designed to stop .38 caliber bullets "with hardly a bruise" should be able to halt a rock without allowing it to bruise the officer. He said the crowd threw the party's newspaper, The Revolutionary Worker, at police officers.

Mason said the RCP defendants were illegally arrested as part of an "illegal dragnet." There was no probable cause to arrest them and no arrest warrant, he said. "The officers just arrived at the scene, saw people running and so started to arrest everyone who was white and running." Only one of the defendants is non-white.

Idol said police "didn't just go in there and arrest. They showed restraint." He said the RCP defendants encouraged residents of Hampton Homes "to get guns" and created a "clear and present danger."

While defendants denied that they incited to riot or urged residents to "get their guns" or "kill the pigs," police said they heard several RCP members encourage the assembled crowd to riot.

RCP Member Arrested On Trespassing Charge

Teresa Kime, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Party, was arrested Thursday prior to a memorial march the group held for a party member killed in Los Angeles earlier this week.

The arrest, in the parking lot at the corner of Freeman Mill Road and East Florida Street, was for a trespassing warrant at Cone Mills, according to the police staff duty officer.

The march was held in memory of Damian Garcia, an RCP member who was one of three person who recently overtook the Alamo and flew a red flag above it. Garcia was fatally injured during a march in a Los Angeles housing project Tuesday. The memorial march began at Freeman Mill Road and East Florida Street, and went to Lee Street to Eugene Street to Whittington Street. About 10 RCP members participated under a police escort that followed them until they returned to the starting point to pick up their vehicles.

Injured RCP Member In Los Angeles

Violence Mars May Day Protests Throughout U.S.

The Associated Press

May Day demonstrations in several cities were marred by violence Thursday as marching Communists chanting revolutionary slogans were met by heckling crowds.

In Los Angeles, a club-swinging confrontation between police and members of the Revolutionary Communist Party interrupted a march by about 250 demonstrators.

The three-mile march from MacArthur Park along Wilshire Boulevard to the downtown garment district was held on the sidewalks after police refused to grant a permit to parade in the street.

It was not known what triggered the confrontation, which occurred an hour after the march started. There were no reports of injuries.

In Charleston, W.Va., a demonstration was broken ~~up~~ by protesters with eggs and ~~clubs~~, who attacked a pickup truck carrying members of the Revolutionary Communist Party. A Beckley woman was knocked to the pavement unconscious and one man was arrested on disorderly conduct charges.

In downtown Atlanta, tempers flared as anti-Communist bystanders engaged in shouting matches with about 25 demonstrators and a scuffle broke out before the march. No injuries or arrests were reported.

The marchers, carrying banners and red flags and flanked by 40 to 50 police officers in riot gear, chanted "We're not Americans, we're proletarians."

Dozens of observers followed along the parade route, carrying American flags and chanting, "U.S.A., U.S.A."

In Oakland, Calif., four members of a group calling itself the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade were arrested for what police said was an attempt to enter City Hall to hang banners and leave May Day messages in red paint.

In Charleston, W.Va., about 300 protesters showed up at a downtown corner where the Communists had said thousands of their comrades would join the May Day demonstration. The protesters sang patriotic songs, chanted slogans and waved U.S. flags, many attached to clubs and sticks.

About an hour later, a small band of Communists appeared in a pickup truck, waving red flags. Some 50 protesters broke through a police line and charged the truck, shouting insults at six or seven persons sitting in the truck.

When the protesters began pelting the truck with eggs and attacking the Communists with their clubs, the truck roared away, leaving the woman lying on the pavement.

The woman, identified at the hospital as Dora Dunn of Beckley, was released after being treated for ~~minor~~ injuries.
